TO ENFORCE DRY LAWS TO THE LETTER

MODIFICATION LOOMING UP SHOULD ENFORCEMENT FAIL

Sensational Inference Drawn
From Statement Made By Senator Watson of Indiana
—Mighty Effort First.

That the national administration, after a genuine effort at drastic enforcement of the prohibition law, may stand for a modification, if enforcement still proves a failure, is the sensational inference that is being drawn through the East from a statement made to the Couzens committee of the senate by Senator James T. Watson, of Indiana. There was a great demand for the exact text of Watson's statement, which is made public in a transcript of the testimony taken by the committee in executive session.

Senator Watson is considered close to the national administration and his interpretation of administration policy is regarded as highly significant.

"I can say this," he told the committee, "that from the president down they have determined to make a tremendous effort to enforce prohibition in the United States and they are going to use all the agencies at their command to enforce it to the limit. Then, if, after it is enforced to the limit, the people will not stand for it, it is for the people to say so and it can be modified."

The policy outlined reveals the purpose behind the drastic drive to block the rum runners off the Atlantic coast and the announced intention of a concentrated campaign against the sources of supply in the wet sections of the eastern part of the United States.

But, while it has been generally understood that the federal forces, with the approval of the president were planning the biggest warfare against the prohibition law violators, this is the first intimation from an administrative source that the question of modification might be taken seriously.

"The matter of prohibition enforcement," says Senator Watson, "is yet in its incipency; that is to say, it is something new. It was started as a nation-wide project; it was a new field; they did not know just how to go about it."

"They know, everybody knows that there are defects in this system," said Senator Watson. "Everybody knows that prohibition is not being enforced; everybody knows that the law is being wantonly violated by wholesale and a good many people are of the opinion that the lack of funds is one of the causes for that. They have not been able to get the requisite number of investigators at the proper salaries."

"They have been compelled to go here and there and yonder and pick up men wherever they could get them, as a rule. They have taken them on the recommendation of senators and representatives and all that sort of thing. That is one of the weaknesses that are involved there and they are recommending that the service be put under the civil service. Of course, that is a matter that is always subject to debate and it would not be necessary to go into it here."

"My understanding is that in order to tighten the enforcement of prohibition and, as Senator Couzens has suggested, to stop it at the source, the plan is this: They have established this cordon of vessels up and down the Atlantic coast and they are seeking in that way to shut off this foreign supply. So far as the internal enforcement is concerned, they have appointed General Andrews. I never saw that gentleman; I do not know him at all, but I have inquired about him and my understanding is that he is especially proficient in the matter of organization; he knows how to organize and direct a force of this kind.

Matter Problematical.
"Of course, the whole thing is problematical. I do not know and it will have to be determined whether he is a fit and qualified man."

"It is a tremendous task. It reaches into millions of homes all over the United States and these men are compelled to feel their way and do the best they can with the circumstances surrounding them. Of course, mistakes have been made and weaknesses have been displayed. Inefficiency everywhere has developed. Everybody knows that. That is not a secret. That is patent. The department acknowledges it. They are doing the best they can, they say, to correct these inefficiencies and strengthen the enforcement of these weak places."

CHANGES IN MAN'S FACIAL ADORNMENT

The styles in hair for men are almost as changeable as those for women. The time was when any man visiting London with hair parted other than straight down the middle was regarded as hopelessly rural, says London Answers. Also not so very many decades ago a man without a beard was hardly regarded as a man at all. This is apparently the clean-shaven age. The style is by no means new, and centuries ago the Roman masters of the world were clean shaven, leaving beards and mustaches to the barbarians—the word, indeed, meaning "bearded ones."

A century or so ago every Englishman was clean shaven, and only a cavalry officer or a foreigner dare appear in a mustache. The fashion changed and beards and whiskers became the correct thing for even young men, and one father, who in his will forbade his heirs to grow mustaches on the ground that they were "foreign" and, therefore, immoral, found few successors.

Inscriptions on Rocks Thought to Be Chinese

Weird rock writings in caves ten miles northeast of Virginia City, Nev., are to be studied with a view to determining whether they are the work of Indians, as heretofore supposed, or of ancient Chinese, says the New York World.

Gee Ding, Chinese student at the University of Nevada, made a visit to the caves recently and expressed belief the writings are Chinese and depict a story of ancient Buddhist priests, an attempt to circumnavigate the globe and of the landing on this continent.

It is legend in China, according to Gee Ding, that thousands of years back, five ships under command of Buddhist priests, set sail and never returned. Gee Ding believes it may be possible the writings were made by these people.

Lightning Photographed

Photography determines the distance of a lightning flash, and hence the dimensions of any of its features. Two cameras are mounted side by side and exposed at the same time, says Nature Magazine. Objects of known distance from the point of observation are photographed along with the lightning, and a comparison of the two pictures, plus a little mathematics, gives the distance of the lightning much more exactly than the old process of counting seconds between the flash and the thunder.

Pure Bred Live Stock in Favor

Experience of Owners Who Are in Position to Make Comparison.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A report just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture on the progress of the better sires-better stock campaign for the improvement of domestic animals states briefly why pure bred animals excel other kinds. The information is based on the average experience of hundreds of stock owners who have been in a position to make comparisons. It thus points to the results which other farmers, who are considering the improvement of their live stock may expect from pure bred sires and also from the combined use of pure bred sires and pure bred dams.

Summary of Points.

Following is a summary of the points in which pure breeds excel:

Based on utility alone, pure bred live stock has an earning power from a third to one-half greater than scrub stock. Pure breeds excel other stock in: Superiority and uniformity in conformation and type, greater sale value, early maturity and economy in the conversion of feed into meat, milk, wool and work.

Surplus pure breeds are salable at satisfactory prices in a majority of cases.

The progeny of pure bred sires has practically a 50 per cent greater sale value than the progeny of sires not pure bred.

Better breeding, combined with proper and adequate feed, practically prevents runty live stock, of which the average farm has about 7 per cent.

Well-bred beef cattle, sheep and swine yield from 5 to 10 per cent more meat than inferior animals of the same live weight, and the meat is of better quality.

Profitable Use of Feed.

Improved live stock makes about 40 per cent more profitable use of feed than common stock. Pure breeds excel grades, and grades excel scrubs.

The use of pure bred sires leads to the ownership and use of fully six times as many pure bred female animals.

The foregoing brief conclusions are based on thorough analyses of large numbers of reports. The movement for better live stock which the department is conducting, in co-operation with the various states, has resulted in a gradually increasing recognition of the many points in which well-bred animals are superior to ordinary live stock. The study and control of animal breeding are among the most important and practical means of making live stock enterprises more profitable to farmers and also of improving the quality of meats.

Barley Is Superior for Fattening Farm Stock

Barley is unsurpassed as a nurse crop for clovers and alfalfa; it is a better feed than oats for fattening hogs, sheep and cattle; and since it is one of the best substitutes for corn, its early maturing quality will make this grain doubly valuable in a short-corn summer.

The early maturing quality of barley gives it a distinct advantage over oats. This is especially true during the present corn shortage. The grain can be threshed about the same time as wheat, eliminating two threshings and making available a midsummer grain feed.

Barley is decidedly superior to late oats as a nurse crop for clovers and alfalfa because it shades the ground less, and, by its early maturity, leaves more moisture in the ground for the young clover.

Chiefly because of its lower percentage of hulls, barley is a better feed than oats for fattening hogs, sheep and cattle. Barley contains more carbohydrates than either wheat or oats, has less fat, and contains only one-third as much crude fiber as oats.

Most Effective Method for Treating Potatoes

The most effective method of treating potatoes for scab is to dip the potatoes in a solution of corrosive sublimate, prepared by dissolving 4 ounces of corrosive sublimate in several quarts of hot water in a 50-gallon barrel and adding enough cold water to make 30 gallons. Place the potatoes in this solution and allow to stand for one hour. Potatoes may remain in the sack when being dipped, but it is better to place them in loose or in a crate that does not absorb the solution. After every six bushels about one-quarter ounce of corrosive sublimate should be added to the solution to preserve its strength. Potatoes should be clean and all rotten or damaged potatoes removed before dipping. Only earthenware or wooden containers should be used for the solution as it corrodes metals.

Utilizing Wheat Straw

Wheat straw can be used as feed, bedding, and as a fertilizing material for the soil. It will be of greatest value when used as feed and bedding and returned to the soil as manure. Fresh straw may be used as a fertilizer when it can be plowed under or worked into the soil in small amounts. It should be used sparingly as a top dressing on growing wheat except on soils that are inclined to blow.

Bold, Fanciful Designs, New Spring Contribution

This crepe de chine printed dress is of the monterey pattern, printed on a tan crepe. Skillful blending of colors and bold fanciful designs promise to be much in favor this spring.

Trend of Fashion With Bright Days of Spring

The interest in gloves continues to lie in novelties. The short-flare cuff takes the lead, with the fancy slip-on gaining all the time. The wrist-fitted, two-clasp glove with trimmed top has won increased representation. For sports and tailored wear, the one-button or one-clasp glove leads in point of fashion. In the novelty gloves, embroidery takes first place for decoration, with perforated effects losing a little of their early appeal. The turn-down cuff is considered by some to be better than the flare cuff.

Fashion this season lays on her colors with the greatest subtlety and in interpreting the mode for spring and summer calls into play all the varied tones and shadings that come under the heading of neutral and natural shades—brilliant tones that are distinctly Spanish in their appeal, and faint, delicate, pastel colors that call to mind the lovely Pompadour and DuBarry of the days of Louis XV.

Today the keynote of fashion is simplicity and harmony. From the crown of her soft little peaked hat of felt to the tips of one-strap shoes, guileless of any ornamentation, the smart woman of the present day is a charming exponent of the vogue for simplicity and for color harmony.

Women have learned the value of accessories as contributing factors to smartness, and their shoes, their stockings and their gloves express their knowledge of the importance of harmony and their realization that subtle tones and a quiet distinction, indefinable but instantly recognized, make for chic in the highest degree.

The trend in daytime fashions is toward sand, natural and gray tones, and this feeling for neutral shadings is evident throughout the entire realm of fashion.

May Trim Peak Crowns Either at Side or Top

One pronounced feature in spring millinery is the attenuated crown, whether it rises sharply or rounds gently, as long as it approaches a peak. Even large hats follow this lead. The crown may be indented or not. The bent or manipulated crown is accomplished in straw, if not as easily at least as effectively, as in felt.

Peak crowns may be trimmed either at top or at side. Top trimmings include flowers in natural effects, or in straw or felt; feathers in brush, pom-pom or drooping forms; bows of ribbon and felt, and other devices.

The small hat takes precedence, as usual, and includes roll brim, short back types and various forms of turbans. The beret is less noticeable for the moment, also the square crown hat. Combinations of fabric and straw are most pronounced, with the expectation of a good season for the all-straw model a little later.

Ribbon trimmings and ribbon hats are in excellent standing. Moire, gros-grain and especially velvet ribbons are much in evidence. Lace is used for drapery, wing forms and insets. There is marked use of straw for ornamentation.

Kimonos With Quilting

In place of the usual embroideries, a lovely kimono of brocade crepe which shades from white to deep-rose has a border design formed by padding the material on the under side and stitching a design after the manner of old-time quilting. The effect is charming and rather different.

Made to Walk In

The newest walking coat is indisputably made to walk in. It has a skirt flared by means of godets or inverted plaits which extend from the low-placed pockets at either side of the front, assuring freedom of movement.

Natural Cements

In Europe natural cements are called Roman cements and they were first manufactured in England in 1796 by James Parker. Natural cements began to be manufactured in France about 1825; in the United States natural cement rock was discovered while building the Erie canal in New York in 1818.

Spares Wanted

Considerable excitement was caused among the guests at a wedding ceremony in a Havre church recently when the lady refused to marry the bridegroom. Such painful scenes might easily be avoided if the bridegroom arranged to keep one or two ladies in reserve.—London Opinion.

Troubles

Troubles never come singly, says the adage, but too frequently hunting for trouble multiplies troubles. He who wants trouble can always find it, for somehow or other, it is most accommodating. Only real troubles make people strong.—Grit.

Real Brotherhood

Some years ago there was a shooting on Eighteenth street. One negro shot another over a dice game. The gun user was arrested by a negro policeman, who turned the prisoner over to another dark-skinned member of the force to hold until the arresting officer could call the patrol wagon. When he returned he found his brother officer standing on the corner, with no prisoner in sight. "Where's dat man Ah put in yo' custody?" inquired the arresting officer wrathfully. "Keep yo' shirt on," replied the other one. "Dot man's a membah o' mah lodge. He gimme th' gran' sign o' distress an' Ah had to turn him loose."—Kansas City Star.

Uses of Firemen

Returning from a fire, the Uniontown (Pa.) fire department stopped long enough to aid a woman who, having forgotten her key, was locked out of her third-floor apartment. The firemen obligingly ran a ladder up to the front window and opened the door from the inside.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 19.—(U. P.)—Reports gained strength today among friends of Bishop Chartrand of Indianapolis, that he is seriously considering refusal of the appointment of Archbishop of Cincinnati. It was said he is reluctant to leave Indianapolis with work on the St. Peter and Paul Cathedral uncompleted.

In the event the Cincinnati Arch-diocese is divided, it was believed he would again be tendered an appointment as archbishop with headquarters in Indianapolis should he decline the present appointment.

No official confirmation of reports of his contemplated refusal was forthcoming, however. Bishop Chartrand is in seclusion and will make no comment on the appointment until he has definitely decided to accept or reject it, his secretary said.

DAUGHTER OF FORMER RESIDENT OF CIRCLEVILLE

Miss Matilda W. Kreigh, of Chicago, registered at The Boggs Hotel is here having some work in Forest Cemetery done for the lots there where reposes all that was earthly of her forefather, the late Joseph Dodridge.

Miss Kreigh's mother, who was Miss Ella Dodridge, will be recalled by some of the older residents and will be remembered by members of St. Philip's church as having one of the most beautiful voices ever heard in that historic edifice. Her father, Joseph Dodridge, whose home was the residence now owned by Mrs. Carrie Patton, was also a member of the choir of St. Philip's. Mr. Dodridge's brother, Philip, owned the residence now occupied by Thomas Jeffries and known as the Joseph Smith residence.

These were very prominent church men and highly respected residents of the early days of Circleville and it is a rare pleasure to meet one of the younger generation, who is a fair representative of those prominent ancestors.

ROUND TABLE TALK

Experiences in business and "Why I Like My Work" was thoroughly discussed pro and con at last night's regular meeting of the Business Women's Club. The program arranged by Miss Helen Rowe was in the form of a round table talk where different members of the club discussed their work. It might be well to note that Mrs. Patton, local probation officer, is a member of the club and had some very interesting tales relative to her work.

Dr. Isa B. Carr's paper which was very interesting and instructive, related to Osteopathy. Miss Helen Steele, bookkeeper at Winorr Canning Co., gave her reasons for liking her work in a very interesting manner and also some facts about the canning industry. Mrs. Graham also spoke very entertainingly.

BUCKEYE LAKE IMPROVEMENTS

In the Harbor Hills section, nearly a score of houses will be erected. Golf grounds and tennis courts are being put in and boating and bathing facilities are being provided. Sex Problem ReallyNo Problem at All

Ramona Tree of Winfield, who has been adjudged the prettiest girl in Kansas, said the other day at a tea: "I get about a hundred letters by every mail from women who want to know how to escape wrinkles and improve their complexion and lengthen their lashes and so on. These letters are beginning to make me tired. I am beginning to feel like the bird dealer. A man bought a canary from a bird dealer, and kept coming back to the store every day to ask all kinds of questions about feeding it and bathing it and cleaning its cage, and I don't know what. One day he said: 'About naming my bird. You see, I don't know whether it's a male or a female. So, of course, I can't name it till I find out, can I? Well, then, what's to be done?' 'Ah,' said the dealer, 'just stick a lump of sugar between the bars of the cage, and if he takes it he's a male, and if she takes it she's a female.'"

King Has Monopoly

When the king telephones, let all other instruments be dumb! That's the rule in Mecca, where King Hussein of Hedjaz has had a telephone system installed, says a recent article in the New Zealand Herald.

The rule is effectively enforced by an automatic device which instantly disconnects all other telephones whenever the receiver is lifted from the king's instrument. As long as King Hussein's telephone is in use, no other telephone can be used in Mecca, save only the one with which the king is talking.

"Did Milton Visit Heaven?"

Certain facetious critics are poking fun at Eli Siegel of Baltimore, the reported winner of the annual poetry prize offered by the Nation. The ground of the criticism is simple. Mr. Siegel's poem is called "Hot Afternoons I Have Seen in Montana," and he confesses he has never been in Montana. The critics find this humorous. Mr. Siegel's reply should be simple. He should point out that two previous poets—John Milton and Dante—wrote poems on heaven and hell long before either of them had even seen either place.—Baltimore Sun.

AMUSEMENTS

"Broken Barriers" Reginald Barker's new special production for Metro, is to play at the Met theater for a run of two days, beginning Thursday. This picture, a screen version of Meredith Nicholson's novel, has what appears to be the biggest all-star cast of the year; fans will find a continual parade of their favorites across the shadow stage.

James Kirkwood appears as Ward Trenton estranged from his wife (Winifred Bryson), who will not allow him a divorce to marry the girl he loves (Norma Shearer). The story hinges on the efforts of this pair to smash the barricades of convention that stand in the way of their happiness, and shows the effect on a wide number of people of their efforts to change old morals for new.

Mae Busch appears as a girl intimated with a lively man-about-town, played by Adolphe Menjou who was recently so successful in Chaplin's "Woman of Paris," and Lubitsch's "The Marriage Circle." Robert Frazer remembered as the hero of Barker's "Women Who Give" and who played opposite Pola Negri in "Men" is the third member of this secondary triangle in the picture.

George Fagett appears as the father of the heroine, whose sister in the picture is played by Ruth Stonehouse a favorite star some years ago, who in this picture, makes her return to the screen after a long absence.

There is still another angle to the story that requires expert acting dealing as it does, with the younger generation. Robert Agnew and Vera Reynolds appear as two jazz crazed young people, recklessly skidding down the primrose path with twice the pace and zest of their elders. Others in the cast are Edythe Chapman, Margaret McWade and George Kuwa.

"Broken Barriers" is a Louis B. Mayer presentation thru Metro. It was adapted to the screen by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin.

CHAMPION ALTITUDE

Flyer Tells Feelings When Seven Miles Above the Earth.

"It is rather difficult to explain one's sensations at extreme altitudes," says John A. Macready, America's champion altitude flyer, writing in this week's Liberty. "The feelings and faculties are not as alert and active and the pilot is not particularly interested in anything except to squeeze as much comfort as he can from his meager sources of protection. The lower part of the body is protected by the cockpit and he gets a small amount of heat from a radiator in the cockpit. The hands suffer most, as the blood circulation is low at high altitudes.

"At altitudes around thirty-five thousand feet the temperature is usually about sixty-five degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, although on February 22 of this year eighty-two and one-half degrees below zero was recorded on the smoked paper of the recording thermograph. Severe as such cold is, however, it is more easily endured than the lack of oxygen. When a flyer reaches an altitude of about twenty thousand feet a peculiar depression attacks him, the sky looks gray and dreary, a queer lassitude takes possession of him, and his faculties are greatly slowed up. He inserts the oxygen tube in his mask, and with a few deep breaths the whole world brightens. He is a different man, ready to think and act quickly.

"Up to an altitude of thirty thousand feet as long as the pilot gets plenty of oxygen he feels no discomfort. Above thirty thousand feet, any exertion causes him to realize that he needs more and more oxygen. If he stoops to make an adjustment, the instruments in the cockpit become dim and shaky to him and it is difficult to focus his mind upon what he is trying to do."

Napoleon's Original Tomb.

The original tomb of Napoleon at St. Helena has fallen into a state of disrepair since the body was removed to state to the Invalides in Paris, according to a letter received from a recent visitor to that remote island. "I walked the five and one-half miles uphill to Longwood, Napoleon's old home," the writer says, "and inspected his much-neglected tomb, which is down in a deep corner of a deep valley—just a slab covered with dirty whitewash—no inscription whatever. The grass around was unkempt, and surrounded by a circle, about twenty paces in diameter, of tall trees, and there was nothing anywhere to tell the visitor when the body was removed, or to whom the old tomb had belonged."

One Fundamental Principle

By J. B. M. CLARK

WHEN Kate Ogilvie heard privately that it was the pretty girl in Rev. Mr. Haywood's choir who had tarried over an admirer on the strength of advice from "Molly Molloy" of the "Heartsease" page of the Montreal Weekly Meteor, she experienced a sudden distaste for her job. For she herself was Molly Molloy, and had heretofore given counsel on affairs of the heart with a zest that the subsequent enthusiasm of the recipients invariably whetted, and which was rarely dampened by untoward happenings.

In this particular case, on the testified diffidence and lack of resolution of a needy suitor, she had advised bringing an unsatisfactory "understanding" to an end and the accepting of a wealthy, if elderly, admirer. And the passionate cry of the discarded one: "To h—l with Molly Molloy! You might have given me a white man's chance to make good!" borne through strange channels to her ears, made her so sick at heart that she threw up a good position and went to visit an old college chum in Los Angeles. Later, liking the new environment, she sought to re-enter the newspaper world, but finding conditions difficult in the Pacific coast city, went from them into the receiving department of a dry goods store as a bookkeeper. And there, in the course of the following year, she made the acquaintance of Charlotte Bosbyshell and Richard Appleton.

Charlotte Bosbyshell (known as "Bobby") was twenty-one years of age and reasonably attractive, but having no steady beau was obsessed by the bleakness of the outlook. She had been in the receiving department for two years. Appleton, who had drifted down from Seattle or somewhere in the North, was understood to be aiming at the "movies." He was nearer thirty than twenty and was of a studious turn. Bobby decided that he would suit her and she strove to captivate him, even seeking advice from Waddington, the married head of the department.

"Well, I can't help you," said Waddington. "Whom do you want to vamp now?"

"Oh, no one special," replied Bobby truthfully. But she showed Appleton photographs of herself in hiking attire and contrived to be near the door when he left at night so that they might go to the car together.

Kate Ogilvie, who was nearer Appleton's own age, discussed economic questions with him, particularly serfdom, but did not approve of his solution of state endowment of motherhood, fearing that it might lead to a worse serfdom still. They talked over this and kindred topics, and discovered they had much in common. He took her to shows on several occasions. . . . Once they had supper together . . . on one of their outings they met Bobby.

Bobby asked Kate quite frankly at the first opportunity if there was anything serious between her and Mr. Appleton, as she herself was getting very fond of him. Besides, Bobby understood from something Kate had once said, that she was interested in "somebody 'back East'."—But she really wasn't. "Nothing at all, Bobby," said Kate cheerily. "Go ahead, my dear. I wish you luck."

Although generous, Bobby did not see very deeply into things, and she told Appleton at the first opportunity. It did settle him. He was inclined to disbelieve it, and thought Kate was trying to be funny about his hurt. He got his chance in the "movies" soon after this, and made rapid headway. They heard he was doing well. He found a place for Bobby after a time, first as an extra, and then in a minor part. She had some natural talent and she worked hard. And after a time, things having become so very different, Bobby fell in love with a camera man and married him.

Whether or not Appleton was greatly concerned is difficult to ascertain at this time. He was greatly engrossed in the career that lay ahead of him. A somewhat piquant situation was unexpectedly created by his old love, suddenly left a rich young widow, coming out to look for him and forgiveness. It was not to be had at any price, but inadvertently she gave him full particulars about how she had not put the case quite properly to Molly Molloy—had in fact cherished some hope that what had actually happened might take place, for she had been aware that the elderly suitor was delicate. But Appleton had been so bitter in his anger that she did not like to explain, and so had blamed everything on Molly Molloy.

"The trouble with you, Kate," said Appleton soon after, taking hold of her chin and turning her face to his, "is that with all your knowledge of affairs of the heart, and your supposed deep understanding of their workings, you have missed one very fundamental principle, namely, that a man can very rarely be 'wished' off from one woman to another. Why didn't you tell me you were Molly Molloy—especially as you had a clear case?"

"I didn't know how you might take it," she said, her eyes dropping. "The clear case might have been difficult to establish. I didn't want to lose your respect. . . . And so . . ."

"And so you did the foolish thing?" he suggested, kissing her.

"Yes," she replied, with wonderful meekness for so self-confident and erudite a person.

Play, Sleep and Hobby for the Middle Aged

What can the middle-aged business man do to keep himself from slipping? Play, sleep and having a hobby are the antidotes, said George E. Bailey, supreme secretary of the Independent Order of Foresters, recently, addressing a fraternal conference in Toronto.

"When the man of fifty feels he is becoming less efficient in his business," said Mr. Bailey, "he is likely to be overcome by a panicky determination to submerge himself in work. He attempts to accomplish in more hours what he was once able to do in less time. This is a fatal mistake.

"Play, not overwork, is the thing of which he is most in need. He should give a week-end or an afternoon each week to recreation and get as far away as possible from the sights and sounds of the city and the thoughts of business.

"Sleep does as much as anything to keep a man from losing his grip. It is a factor too often ignored. The middle-aged business man should send himself to bed on time."

Hobbies such as gardening, fishing, an interest in art, music or books are of essential importance. Cheerful social outlets are another big factor, says Mr. Bailey.

Lesson for May 24

SAUL BEGINS HIS GREAT CAREER

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:20-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified."—1 Cor. 2:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Saved Saul From Danger.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul Preaching in Damascus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Saul a Bold Preacher.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courage in Witnessing for Christ.

1. Saul Preached Christ in Damascus (vv. 19-22).

1. Saul's Fellowship With the Disciples (v. 19).

After Saul was baptized he remained certain days with the believers in Damascus (v. 19). How beautiful to think of the transformation which took place—the one who was so passionately bent on their destruction was now enjoying fellowship with the disciples.

2. Straightway Preaching in the Synagogues (v. 20).

Saul, like every one who is really converted, begins to tell of the newly found Savior. As soon as he is saved he goes to save others. His message concerned the deity of Christ. His doctrinal belief is summed up in six words, "He is the Son of God."

3. The People Amazed (v. 21).

They knew that the very one who had been the ringleader in persecuting the Christians in Jerusalem, and had come to Damascus for the express purpose of bringing them bound to the chief priests, was now passionately advocating that which he had so vehemently sought to destroy. When a man is saved there ought to be such a change as to cause the people to notice it.

4. The Jews Confounded (v. 22).

Saul retired into Arabia for three years. During this time he was taught the full truths of his ministry (Gal. 1:17-18). Saul increased in spiritual strength and confounded the Jews, proving that Jesus was not only the Son of God, but their Messiah.

II. Saul Escapes From the Jews (vv. 23-25).

He used the Scriptures with such skill that the Jews could not answer him. Finding that the argument was against them, the Jews took counsel how they might destroy Saul. So intent were they upon killing him that they watched the gates of the city day and night that they might take him. When this became known to the disciples, they let him down at night in a basket by the wall.

III. Saul Visits Jerusalem (vv. 26-29).

This journey to Jerusalem was in strange contrast with the one from Jerusalem to Damascus. The one was as a leader of an important expedition under the authority of the Jewish officers with the prospect of a place of distinction in the council of the Jewish nation. Now he is an outcast, disowned by his countrymen, and fleeing for his life. These are the outward circumstances, but he knows the fellowship of the Lord Jesus whom he once hated.

1. Suspected by the Disciples (v. 26).

The believers at Jerusalem had not heard fully about Saul's conversion. They knew nothing of his sojourn in Arabia, and his preaching at Damascus after his return. Therefore they regarded him as a spy. "Part of the penalty of wrongdoing is the difficulty of restoration in the good opinion of honorable men."

2. Barnabas' Confidence in Saul (v. 27).

Barnabas was a man filled with the Holy Spirit (Acts 11:24) and therefore able to discern the reality of Saul's conversion. He was in reality a "son of consolation" and here showed his kind spirit.

3. Saul in Fellowship With the Disciples (v. 28).

He was not content merely to visit with the brethren. He spoke boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

IV. Saul Sent to Tarsus (v. 30).

A conspiracy similar to that one at Damascus was formed against Saul. When the brethren knew of it they sent him to Tarsus. Saul's life was in danger everywhere except among the Gentiles. He now is back to the place of his birth. The first and best place for one's testimony is in his home. Saul's conversion was typical of the conversion of the Jewish nation. Their eyes will be opened by a personal revelation of Jesus Christ to them, and when they accept Him as their Savior and Messiah, they will go forth as witnesses to the Gentiles.

NEIGHBORLY KINDNESS OF WHISLER FOLK

Came With Teams and Prepared R. W. Hinton's Field for Planting.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hinton, of Whisler, were gratefully and thankfully surprised on Thursday morning of last week by the arrival of sixteen good and kind friends and neighbors with sixteen teams of horses and their plows, who entered an eight acre field of sod about 7 o'clock and 11 o'clock had the sod turned under. Horses were fed and dinner served at 11:30.

We knew nothing of our kind friends' anticipations and arrangements until I. M. Rossiter, who knew that I had reserved the land thinking that I would be able to farm that amount myself, but owing to a badly sprained ankle from which I have been disabled since February and am still unable to walk without the aid of crutches or cane.

Mr. Rossiter, being aware of the fact that I was unable to do the work myself, called at my home Monday morning and informed me that he had decided to invite the men of the neighborhood to assist him in plowing the ground for me and they kindly responded. One can scarcely imagine what a beautiful sight forty-five nice horses would make all working at the same time in an eight acre field.

Those who furnished teams were Messrs. I. M. Rossiter, J. E. Allen, Harley Moss, Roy Allen, John Warren, John Spencer, Arthur Imler, Claude Goodman, Lewis Crawford, A. W. Imler, Frank Hartranft, Floyd Kent, Lawrence Spencer, Fred Lutz, Alfred Paxton, Cephus Newhouse and John Walters.

Now, kind friends, it will be impossible for us to express our appreciations for your assistance and kindness to us in so many ways and will only say to all those who furnished teams and those who used the teams you have our heartfelt thanks and sincerely hope that you will all be richly rewarded for your kindness.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hinton.

Positively the End

She—Now I'm not going to discuss the matter with you any longer. I told you two hours ago that I'd said my last word in this matter.

GERMAN PROFESSOR REFUTES OLD MYTH

Do uncivilized, aboriginal people have better eyesight than do civilized? Dr. A. Berger, writing in the Berliner Tageblatt, says no. He adds that the popular assumption that uncivilized peoples see better is based upon a confusion of practice and special training with excellence of sight. The superior eyesight of aborigines is only apparent and not real. They see certain things, which escape our untrained eye, better because of long training and habit.

Every collector of zoological specimens, Doctor Berger insists, is like an uncivilized man in that he can detect the specimens he is looking for much more quickly than can the ordinary man. This is due solely and purely to special training, and not to superior ity of eyesight. The same thing applies to aboriginal folk.

The only thing in which uncivilized tribes excel is in their ability to see at night, in what to us seems the dark. But this, too, is due solely to the fact that the uncivilized man has been trained to use his eyes at night, while city folk have not.

STERN JUSTICE IS CODE OF BEDOUIN

The moral code of the Bedouin is his only guide in life. These people of the desert lead a life regulated entirely by traditional rules which are strictly enforced. Theft is an almost unheard of thing, and the culprit is considered an outlaw not only by his tribe, but even by those with whom it might be at war. This attitude of the Bedouin community amounts virtually to a death sentence to the thief, for without support he cannot survive in the unlimited stretches of the desert. Murders are extremely rare, this being due chiefly to the time-honored institution of the blood feud. Nothing can save the assassin from capital punishment if the murder has been committed from motives of greed and jealousy. Even if this is not the case he will not escape being killed by the next of kin of the victim, unless he pays the blood price, which is generally very high.—Dr. Edward J. Bing, in Current History Magazine.

FINDER OF LEPER CURE IN DANGER

Has Narrow Escape From Chinese Bandits.

Washington.—Within a few days after the United States public health service announced the release of lepers as "cured" by a treatment which included the use of chaulmoogra oil, word came from Joseph F. Rock, who located the chaulmoogra tree in Burma, telling of his narrow escape from Chinese bandits.

Mr. Rock was leader of the National Geographic society expedition to Yunnan province, China, which found blight-resisting chestnut trees for transplantation in the United States. After a few months in this country he returned to Yunnan to seek plant specimens for the Arnold arboretum, at Cambridge, Mass.

Mr. Rock spent one night in a dilapidated village temple, full of coffins. His native guard deserted him; outside the town the heads of native victims, captured some days before, were hanging from poles.

"From Tunchwan to Chaotung is five days' journey, and two days out of Tunchwan I had the most terrible experience of my life," Mr. Rock writes.

"With much misgivings I left Tunchwan. The first day passed without incident, but the second had much in store for us. After lunch, under an old walnut tree we made our way over the mountains with my 12 Nashi, 20 mules, 40 soldiers, and all the followers who took advantage of my going and joined on for the sake of protection which the soldiers gave.

Robbers Pursue Caravan.

"We had not gone very far when my head muleteer came and said that robbers were behind the caravan. I waited for the mules to catch up with us, and as they came in sight I rode on, but not for long, as my boys yelled 'Robbers are coming,' and at that moment they opened fire on us. My native soldiers behaved rather bravely, but we soon found that the brigands outnumbered us considerably and that the battle was to be a one-sided affair.

"We pushed on under fire as best we could through a pine-covered slope while the soldiers engaged the brigands; the latter pursued us, and we retreated, all of us, soldiers included, under the fire of the brigands down a deep ravine which we had to cross and up the other side over a most terrible rocky trail. The firing continued the rest of the afternoon. Thanks to the bad aiming of the brigands we lost only one soldier. We reached the small plain of Yichesun, on the edge of it being a small hamlet called Panpiengai. As we reached the plain, I thought, 'Thank God, now we were safe,' but, alas, the brigands followed us, they looted the small hamlet, captured three soldiers with their guns, and while they were busy there we reached the village of Yichesun, where we had to stop for the night.

Brigands Chase Guards.

"Just as I arrived and passed through the dilapidated old gate (but no wall) there also arrived 35 soldier guards sent to us from Chaotung. As I was talking with their officer, one of the Tunchwan soldiers came running into the village to tell me that 200 robbers were only one and a half miles from the village and that they could not hold them back. I sent the Chaotung soldiers to help the Tunchwan soldiers, but soon they all returned with the robbers at their heels.

"I was quartered in a miserable old temple full of coffins in the center of the village. The brigands came to within half a mile of the hamlet where there was a large temple, and of this they took possession. Darkness came on. I never spent such a terrible night in all my life. At midnight the officers of the soldiers came and announced that the brigands were outside and that they could not hold the place and that they could not protect me. I had opened my trunks and distributed $600 in silver among my men, wrapped up some extra warm underwear, a towel, condensed milk and some chocolate, besides ammunition for my two .45-Colts. I sat fully clad waiting for the turn of events. Every minute I expected the firing to commence. The soldiers said that they could protect me but not my boxes, and that the best thing would be to retreat and hide if the brigands rushed into the place. The people of the village began burying their few valuables and great excitement ruled the hamlet. It was a terrible wait and a long night.

"Outside of the hamlet were hanging from poles heads of brigands that had been captured some days before. I was informed that 600 bandits were outside the village and that capture was irresistible. I cannot tell you how I felt. However, at 4 a. m. they were still outside and no shot had been fired. At dawn there was no one to be seen. They had vanished."
